Bank loans liquidity - Cost of forced selling of USD 10 million

- Transaction costs for U.S. bank loans declined over the past week, as bid-ask spreads narrowed and market impact eased slightly.
- Trading costs for non-U.S. leveraged loans edged up, driven mainly by higher market impact and a modest reduction in market depth.
- The quoted-price standard deviation remained unchanged for both U.S. and non-U.S. bank loans.
